bill (Mr. Hard's) was reported as correctly engrossed, and Immediately had its third reading; but was laid over until to morrow. The Hudson River Railroad bill was then taken up in committee, and discussed until the hour for a recess. No question.

There were, it will be seen, many very eminent eloquent and experienced Statesmen and Jurists, in the Convention of 1821. There were others who are remembered as active, noisy members, whose harangues were as tedious as their views were crude. In this category, if we are not mistaken, stood Mr. Battoos of Schoharie, and Mr. Eastwood of Onondaga.

The description of the hours for a recess. No question. In the House, a bill was reported for the committee on ways and means providing for the borrowing of $30,000, at not more than 6 per cent for the payment of canal damages, and passed.
